Back to School? Cool!

by Suzy Spafford

Many, many years ago, two brothers discovered the Beak Isles. Their names were Tim Duck One and Tim Duck Two.
Tim Duck Two started the town of Duckport there. To this day, pictures of this fearless explorer can be seen all over town.
How many can you find?

THE NEW KID

It was the first day of school in Duckport.

“Now I look like a second grader,” Suzy Ducken declared.

Suzy and her best friend, Emily Marmot, walked to school together. Emily kept pulling hair bows out of her bag.

“What do you think?” she asked Suzy. “I can’t decide which one to wear.”

“I think you’re driving me crazy!”

Suzy giggled.

Jack Quacker zipped past them on his skateboard.

“Woo-hoo!” he shouted.

“Second grader coming through!”

“Look out!” Suzy called.

Jack whipped around a little girl.

“Oh, no!” said Suzy.

“That’s my new neighbor, Penelope O’Quinn.”

“Are you okay, Penelope?” Suzy asked.

“I’m all right,” Penelope answered shyly.

Emily helped Penelope pick up her lunch.

There were olives, a tuna-and-marshmallow sandwich, and a green banana.

How odd, thought Emily. She had a jelly sandwich cut into neat triangles.

Suzy thought Penelope's lunch looked interesting. "Want to walk to school with us?" Suzy asked Penelope.

“That would be nice,”
said Penelope.
Secretly, she was thinking,
That would be great!
She hadn’t made any new Duckport friends yet.

“I can’t wait to meet our new teacher,” Suzy said.

“I brought her something,”
Penelope said in her soft voice.

“See?”

“It sure is . . . thorny,” Emily remarked.

“Thank you!”
replied Penelope.

“I wanted to get her something that no one else would.”

Suzy smiled.
“I only brought her a boring old apple!”

At the school yard, the girls joined a jump-rope game.

“Let’s do the bubble gum song,” called Suzy.

Suddenly a voice boomed,

BUBBLE GUM, BUBBLE GUM, IN A DISH.

HOW MANY PIECES DO YOU WISH?

ONE . . . TWO . . . THREE . . .

...FOUR...FIVE...SIX...

Windows rattled.

Traffic stopped.

Penelope sure was full of surprises!

GETTING TO KNOW YOU

Everyone was anxious to meet the new teacher.

“I wonder if she’s funny,” said Jack.

“I wonder if she’s strict,” said Corky Turtle.

“I wonder why she’s not here yet,” said Suzy.

Just then, the loud BRRIIINNGG! of a bicycle bell rang behind them. “Sorry I’m late!” the teacher sang out. “I stopped for doughnuts! Nothing kicks off the school year like a good cruller, I always say!”

“I am Ms. Cornelia O’Plume,” she announced. “But if you like, you may call me Ms. O.”

Ms. O pulled some very odd things out of her bag.

“Well, boys and girls,” Ms. O’Plume began.

“We have a very exciting year ahead of us.”

“We are going to keep journals. We are going to work with fractions. And we are even going to build a city out of snack crackers.”

“Sometimes,” Ms. O’Plume said, “we will stand on our heads. But mostly, we are going to HAVE FUN!”

“Now it’s your turn.

Suzy Ducken, would you please tell us about yourself?” Ms. O asked.

“Certainly, Ms. O’Plume,” replied Suzy. Folks always noticed her good manners.

Ms. O did, too.

Suzy described her rock collection.

Then Jack performed his latest skateboard move.

Corky talked about his interest in maps. He especially liked Ms. O's globe earrings.

Emily skipped her turn. She was busy handing out napkins. "Doughnuts can be so messy!" she observed.

Finally, it was Penelope's turn.

"My favorite color is brown, because it goes with me," she began.

"And my favorite snack is stuffed olives—because I like food that looks you in the eye!"

Then she added, “And I like being a porcupine because I can put stuff on my quills!”

Her classmates laughed.

Who was this new kid, anyway?

“Ms. O’Plume?” Suzy asked.

“What were you like in school?”

“Let’s say I had an unusual way of looking at things,” Ms. O said. Then she turned and gave Penelope a great big smile.

A BIG FAN

The students in Ms. O'Plume's class were wiggling. And it was exactly what Ms. O had asked them to do! Doing the "Jell-O dance" was how everyone warmed up for art.

Ms. O'Plume divided the class into three groups.
She gave each group some very unusual art supplies.

“I would like you to create your very own leaf art,” Ms. O instructed. “Think about expressing the beauty of the season in a whole new way! No idea is a bad idea.”

“Let’s think of something really cool,” Suzy said to her friends.

“Let’s wait and see what everybody else is doing,” said Jack.

“That’s a bad idea.” Emily scowled. Jack replied, “But Ms. O said there are no bad ideas!”

“Trust me!” Suzy insisted. “Copying is always a bad idea.”

“I know what we could make,” Penelope offered.

Everyone listened as she softly told her plan.

All the groups were hard at work. Finally, Ms. O called out, "Finish up, kids! It's show time!"

Vivian Snortwood's group went first.
"We put the leaves under the paper and rubbed the crayons on the top," Vivian explained.

"Very nice," Ms. O remarked.

"I love the colors!"

The next group unrolled their paper.
The trees on their picture were covered with real leaves.

“I like the way you used those leaves,” said Ms. O’Plume.

“Next group!”

Suzy and her friends made a pile of leaves in the middle of the floor. Penelope paused dramatically, then announced, “I give you . . . FALL!” Jack turned on the ceiling fan.

The leaves swirled all around.
It was like being outside on a windy day!
The children and Ms. O'Plume erupted into applause.
“Bravo!” said Ms. O.
“Living art! How original!”

As they cleaned up the leaves,
Jack told Penelope, “Your idea was really different,
but it turned out great!”
“Penelope’s ideas are different,” Suzy said. “And that’s what we like about her!”
