Friends Forever

Witzy wanted to make a wish. "If only I had a wishing puff," he sighed, looking around the garden.

But it was no use. The wind had blown all the wishing puffs away. "I guess I won't get my wish today," Witzy said sadly.

"Don't worry, Witzy," said his good friend Boof. "We'll find a wishing puff for you."
So Lulla looked way down low, while Patches looked way up high.

Suddenly, Boof began to sneeze.

"Achoo...achoo...ACHOO!" The little bear popped right up with each new sneeze.

"Oh, deary-dear-dear," clucked Lulla, shaking her head. "This will never do."

"I think I see what's making Boof sneeze," said Patches, pointing to a trail of fluff
in the air.

The friends followed the fluffy trail to a polka-dotted field of flowers. And there, sitting in the middle of the cornflowers,
was a wishing puff for Witzy!

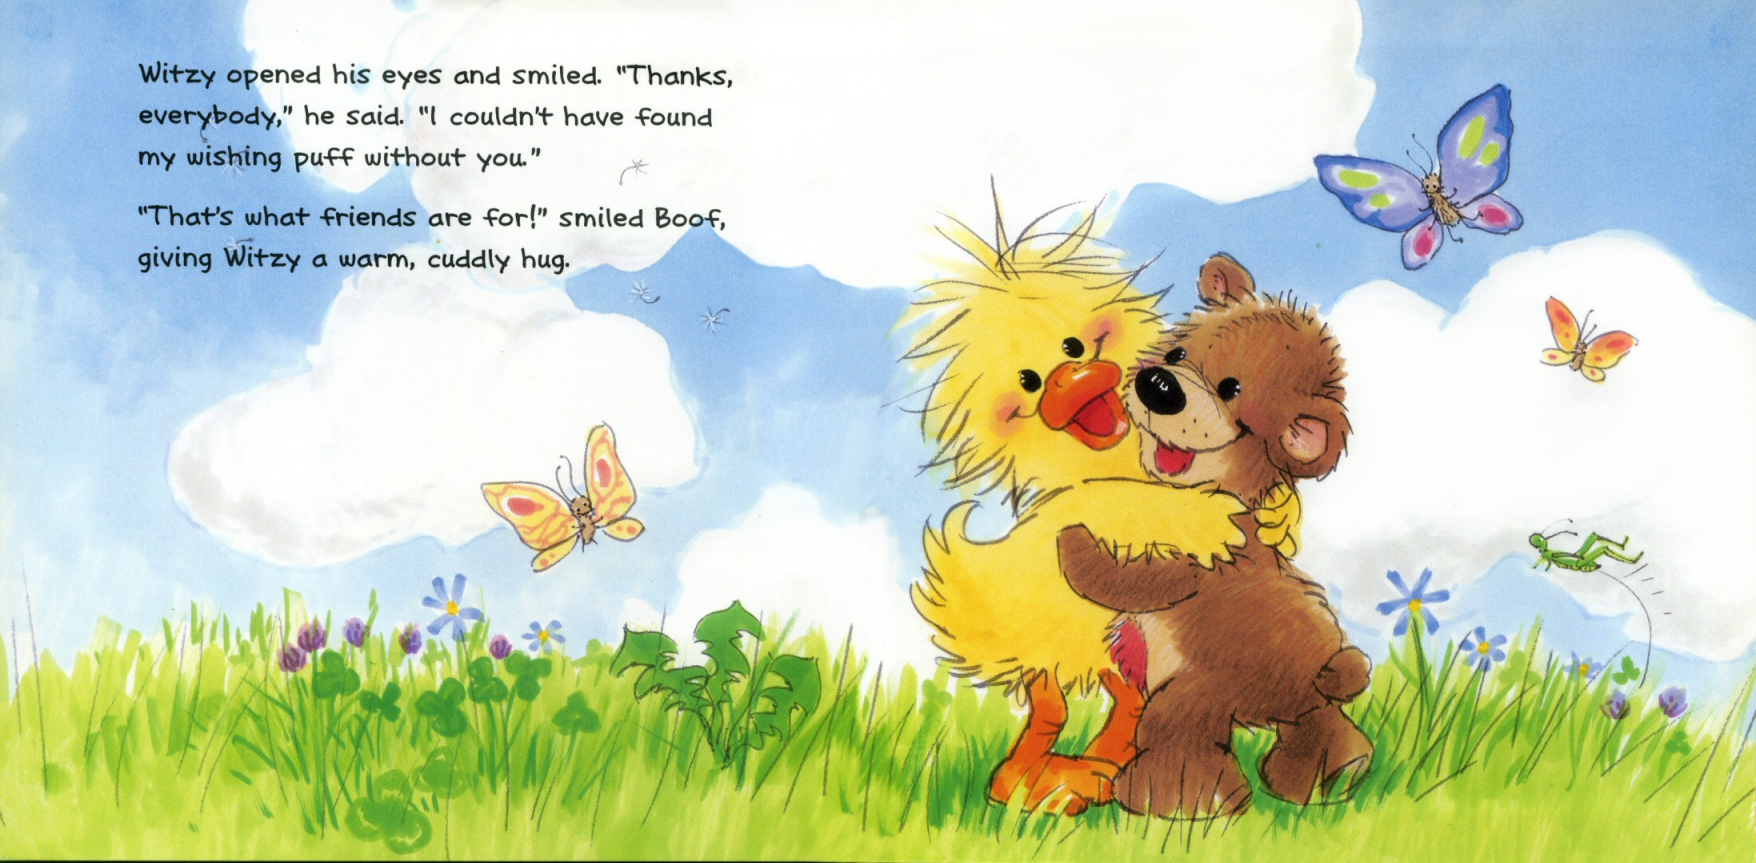

Boof proudly plucked the wishing puff out of the ground and handed it to his friend. Witzy closed his eyes and blew. "I wish we could be friends forever," he whispered happily.

Witzzy opened his eyes and smiled. "Thanks, everybody," he said. "I couldn't have found my wishing puff without you."

"That's what friends are for!" smiled Boof, giving Witzzy a warm, cuddly hug.
